A FITTING REBUKE.

Administered by a Heroic Messenger Boy to a Cowardly and Stingy Man.

There was a trifling fire in a west side street the other day which caused a good deal of excitement and incidentally gave a fat man a lesson in courtesy. The fire started in the apartments where the man and his mother lived. The man started about the time the fire did and got down four flights of stairs to the street before his mother knew what was up. When she discovered the fire she promptly fainted, says the New York Mail and Express.

Meanwhile the fat man stood in the street

Meanwhile the fat man stood in the street yelling: "Save my mother! Save my mother!" A messenger boy who was passing stopped, saw the smoke, ran up the stairs, aroused the woman and brought her out in safety. The neighbors cheered and the fat man looked uncomfortable.

"Here, boy," he whispered. "Here's a quarter for you."

The boy's face expressed his disgust.

"Aw, save it," he said, "and buy yourself some nerve food."

The crowd laughed, the fat man blushed war.

The crowd laughed, the fat man blushed and the boy went whistling down the street. He didn't know that he had been a hero, and the fat man felt himself a coward.

THEY DROP FROM THE SKY.

Shooting stars vary in weight from 30 grains to seven pounds.

In most cases of luminous meteors a train of light many miles in length is left behind.

One characteristic of meteoric stones is the fused black crust, like varnish, with which the surface is coated. There are numerous records and stories in all ages and countries of the fall of stones from the sky; but until recent times they ware treated by philosophers as instances of popular incredulity and superstition. Meteoric stones have in times past been regarded with religious veneration. At Emesa, in Syria, the sun was wroshiped under the forn, of a black stone, reported to have fallen from heaven. The great stone of the pyramid of Cholula, in Mexico, has a similar history.

From the height and apparent diameter, the actual diameter of the largest fireballs is estimated to vary from about 500 feet to half a mile. One or two instances are on record where the train of the fireball continued shining for an hour after the bod; disappeared.
